Yukari's V4 barely changed anything, and the one labeled "power" is laughable in that regard. The soft is hardly different from the pure one, while they could have easily made a whisper one, someone actually did it in Utau.

Luka's V4 changed so much, you can't even recreate her old "tone", she often sounds like someone else.

This, on top of people over/mis-using the new features is kind of disappointing.

I'm not fan of Luka but I agree with this, Luka V4 sounds completely different to the point you can't even tell if is she anymore.

My hopes now are to wait someone capable to handle the Cat.

I played F 2nd after having gotten pretty good at F and I still had some trouble starting out. F 2nd is the harder of the two.

Just practice, you'll get into the swing of things eventually. Gets easier the more accustomed you get to moving around the controller and the more familiar you get with the songs.

I don't get it either. Project Diva is really easy compared to other rhythm games, but I do love it. I just played through each song 1 per difficulty because you're forced to then stuck to extreme because its more fun. Now I only really play 9-10 star edit mode songs that are way harder than the main songs.

Before PD, the only rhythm games I really played were EBA, Osu, and Guitar Hero/Rock Band.

I've been playing through the 3DS one now and it seems a bit easier than the playstation ones, for the most part. It's also very lenient on scoring. It's like 85% for an S rank.

I would love it if it came out for PC it would benefit tremendously since it's a more open platform but I think Sony probably sweetened the deal in order to make Vocaloid fans switch to PS4. It doesn't make any sense otherwise. Sega has been porting games left and right, admittedly old ones tho.
