It's all right but I found it to be underwhelming, only because it felt like Project Diva 1 in terms of gameplay and content, and when it was released, there was already Project Diva f on Vita, which raised the bar of what I expected in a portable rhythm game.

Good music selection and greater difficulty than pdf, but the problem is song length. For some reason, they condensed all the songs into arranged versions that are only 1 minute long. Really underwhelming and boring to play. Gu

It's Project Diva's cute little sister with almost 0 budget. Even with data install the load times are fucking horrendous, the song list is very short and, although you can buy costumes for her she doesn't show up wearing them in songs, just the main menu. The gameplay is also a little different from PD as the d-pad's buttons have their own inputs now. Beatmaps are ok overall it's ok as long as the load times don't put you to sleep first.

But I decided to put some grated carrot on top since Gumi really, really likes carrot; and as a decoration. The cream cheese frosting is

Yes. You get a reversible cover, DLC for 5 extra songs, and an outfit in 3 colours. The codes are for JP accounts so you need one to use it but even if you don't then at least you get a reversible cover. And you always have the code to sell/give away/use on a future JP account you make.

You just need to get one of the first printing of copies to get the extras. So where you get it from doesn't really matter since it hasn't come out yet and you'll be getting a first print copy guaranteed since you're preordering.

I'd probably suggest against Amazon since it's being sold by third party resellers so you'd be paying about 20% more for it. The easiest places to place an order for it to import it would probably be Playasia, amiami, or CDJapan. If you don't mind that it's marked up a bit on Amazon you can always order it there if you think that'd be easiest for you.

If you have any questions then feel free to ask.
