

The Kolbrin Bible

by Glenn Kimball

There are many different "Bibles" that survive in our era of discovery. They include the "Dead Sea Scrolls" from Israel, the "Nag Hammadi Library" from Egypt, the "Kebra Nagast" from Africa, the "Bee Bible" from China (still a part of the canon of Eastern Orthodox Christians), the "Writings and Teachings of the Buddha Issa" (Jesus) from Tibet and now the extensive Kolbrin Bible from Britain. Each contains a different view of the same events in history. Each vindicates the other as having come from the same source.

The Kolbrin is more significant than a mere religious history lesson. It is the first Judaic/Christian document that binds our scientific understanding of human evolution with creationism and intelligent design. The mathematical principles from the Kolbrin reflect the ancient interest of the Druids in the stars, mathematics and global catastrophe. The Kolbrin speaks of the return of the "Destroyer" planet, a dark star that has caused a disaster in the past and is predicted to do so again.

The Kolbrin Bible is the collection of documents (Bronze Book) that was hidden at the time of the burning of the Glastonbury Abbey in England by Edward the First (Longshanks) in 1184 AD. It has been preserved by secretive groups for the last 850 years. Edward sought to destroy the Kolbrin believing it to be a heretical rival of the Holy Bible and a potential threat to his rightful claim as King of England. By Edward's time in history the 1,920 acres of Glastonbury had long been considered a sacred gift to the family of Jesus and often operated like a sovereign nation, not paying taxes to the crown and riddled with mystery and religious significance.

In 1992 a leader of the failing "Hope Trust", that considered itself the protector of the Kolbrin, distributed a copy before its complete deregistration in 1995 intending to preserve it before it could be lost with the dissolution of the trust. The Yow World Books copy of the Kolbrin comes from one of those 1992 original distributed copies that was sent to India for publication. There are two published versions, ours in America and the Culdean Trust version in New Zealand. There isolated copies in Lebanon, England, the Vatican and others around the world.

Why Great Britain?

Great Britain played a significant role in the saga of the Bible and part of the lives of many of its most significant personalities. The Romans called the ancient druid fraternity centered in Britain by the name of "Magi", the same fraternal order that had mentored the Pharaohs in Egypt, Emperors in ancient China, Royals of India and all the Caesars in Rome. These "Wisemen" were teachers of nine courses of study, including astronomy, mathematics, oratory, medicine and religion. Much of that knowledge is contained in the Kolbrin. Their mummies have been found on the Silk Trade routes into China and have been depicted in paintings and written histories as counselors along side world rulers for thousands of years. They were the first international group to recognize Jesus as the antecedent for the messianic prophecies having anticipated his birth from their knowledge of the stars and the teachings of their ancestors. They used Stonehenge and other facilities in Britain in their schools. By the time of Jesus Jowett estimates that there were 60,000 students in the schools of Britain having taught notables like Pontius Pilate (Lucius from Spain) and his patron Lucius Sejanus, the praetorian prefect of Tiberius Caesar. Others included Britanicus, the son of Claudius Caesar and a significant group of the Roman elite. Constantine himself was educated in Britain from the religious teachings in the British Schools and was most likely acquainted with the Kolbrin.

The very word "Brit" isn't English, but rather Hebrew for "Covenant". The British considered themselves the people of the covenant because their connection with the "Ten Lost Tribes" from the Assyrian conquest of Judea in the 8th century BC. The word "Saxon" means the sons of Jacob. The "Ten Lost Tribes" were never really lost at all. The Kolbrin can rightfully be called the lost Bible of the Ten Lost Tribes.

Jeremiah the prophet fled the conquest of the Babylonians in 600 BC and fled via Ethiopia to Britain where his tomb is in Ireland to this day. He took with him the daughter of King Zedekiah of the house of David and the illustrious ancestor of Jesus. That is why Jesus' grandmother, St. Anna, was born in Brittany. That is why the survivors of the crucifixion eventually migrated to France and Glastonbury England after Jesus' death. They had family and allies in Western Europe. These people knew and understood the teachings of the Kolbrin long before our Bible was compiled in 325 AD by Constantine at the Nicene Council.

The Kolbrin also has a special third party account of the Exodus from Egypt at the time of Moses. Princess Scotsa, daughter of Ramases II, lived during the time of Moses and was rumored to have been one of the many princesses who cared for the infant Moses. She married a Hebrew noble who took her to Britain. Scotland is named after her. The Exodus portion of the Kolbrin reads like a third party account, exactly as Scotsa would have told the story.

What Does The Kolbrin Contain?

The first part of the Kolbrin contains the creation story that both reads like a religious and a scientific text. The last two books in the Kolbrin are about Jesus. They read like a text book biography, as would have been taught in an ancient British school. The Kolbrin contains the moral teachings which they considered fundamental in society.

The Kolbrin survives like the curriculum of an ancient British history book. It is the only Judaic/Christian document to tell the whole story of human creation, including the people who were here on the earth prior to the coming of Adam and Eve alluded to in the Holy Bible. The term "Fallen Angels" in Genesis didn't refer to spirit beings but men who married the daughters of Adam and Eve and had children. They came from an advanced scientific and religious society who survived by hiding in caves after an earlier cataclysm. They called themselves "The Sons of God". As "Fallen Angels" their wickedness had precipitated a cataclysm. The Kolbrin has one of the most elegant stories of the coming of Adam and Eve in existence. Suddenly the story of Atlantis and Lumeria and their tales of "Eden" and catastrophe because of wickedness tie into the beginning creation story from the Holy Bible. They prophesied that there would be another cataclysm followed by a thousand years of peace finalized by a judgment and the return of the "Sun God" in the same fashion the Hebrew Prophets predicted the Millennium and the coming of the Messiah and the final judgment of God.

Do Any Other Discoveries Vindicate The Kolbrin?

Several decades ago a sword from the sixth century, the time of King Arthur, was found in Pennsylvania. This sword was featured in the book "Holy Kingdom" by Adrian Gilbert from England and his research team. Adrian suggested that it may very well be the sword Excalibur. From the frescos on the Stoke Dry Cathedral in England from the seventh century AD we see the story of King Arthur II having been killed by Native American Indians. Written on the blade of this sword is the word "Colbrin" or "Kolbrin" in ancient Nagef, a language spoken in the Middle East at the time of King Arthur. The Nagef language is the language of the artifacts found at our Illinois archeological site.

Copies of the very large Kolbrin text are available at www.ancientmanuscripts.com or by calling 1-888-904-9394. Supportive documents and materials can likewise be obtained via the net or phone. We live in the day of discovery. The Kolbrin is one of the newest discoveries and perhaps the most significant in over a thousand years. The Kolbrin is like "eye candy" for those who crave to know more about prophecy and religion. It may be the most important document ever found when the "Destroyer" returns again.
